

STYLE HER

NOUGHTIES NOSTALGIA

Words: Anna Solomon

Venus corset
£245, miaou.com

Corsets and crops

In the heady days of the millennium, the only time your midriff wasn't on display was while wearing a corset. So, if you're not a fan of donning half a garment, check out Miaou's cute collection of bodice-style tops.

Blumarine SS22

Crochet knit dress
£1,390, etro.com

Crocheting

Missoni reminded us in a recent campaign that crocheting had a moment in the noughties – there were ponchos, obviously, and a knitted halterneck fulfilled the second order of 'jeans and a nice top'. Fellow Italian fashion house Etro has also taken inspiration in an onslaught of purled pieces.

Missoni

Accessories

From head (bandanas, tinted sunglasses) to toe (wedges and anything with a monogram – thanks Paris Hilton) and everything in between, accessories were everything in the noughties. Ideally, you'd wear all of the above in one outfit. What can we say? More was more.

Mini swipe bag
£418, coperniparis.com

Bridge platform sandal, £380, coperniparis.com

Snake head chain belt
£908, robertocavalli.com

Square snake sunglasses, £104, robertocavalli.com

Square knife pump
£785, gucci.com

Loverboy

Net and mesh

In 2000, J Lo wore that most iconic of green Versace dresses to the 42nd Grammy Awards, rendering mesh a staple of the decade. This migrated to a broader penchant for garments with holes in them, and a 'distressed' aesthetic generally. We've also nodded to the decade's obsession with baker boy hats and layering straps over long sleeves with pieces from MatchesFashion and Givenchy, respectively.

Above left Piercing-embellished baker boy cap, £195, matchesfashion.com

Above right T-shirt dress with tag effect prints, £1,430, givenchy.com

Left Riviera rope shopping bag, £850, dsquared2.com

Low-rise

The news of a 2000s resurgence struck fear into the hearts of many due to this most unflattering of trends. Who actually thought that putting a waistband below your stomach and hips was a good idea? We certainly didn't sign it off. Miu Miu and Missoni officially confirmed the return of this cursed craze in their SS22 shows.

Right Rigid low-rise jeans, £510, modaoperandi.com
Below Carter pleated mini skirt, £340, net-a-porter.com

Miu Miu SS22

Missoni SS22

